Reflection Evaluation

Designer Evaluation

Being the designer throughout the project was fun. It was nice getting a hands-on experience working with a “client” and having to put together a design for someone else versus making something for myself. After going through the brief questions, branding questions, and client meetings, it made it much easier to navigate the whole process having that solid foundation of information to work from.

Client Evaluation

Being the client for this project was also a good experience. Being able to adequately describe my vision to another designer so they can try to capture and create that was very interesting. It gave me a better idea of how to interact with clients in general and how to engage with them just by being in their shoes. Overall, the design of my website was what I wanted.
