Design Shark

Statement

The plan of my hosted site project was to build a site around my original design plan for my email campaign and continue with that story and fill in the gaps of Design Shark. I wanted the site to be fun, artistic, and establish what it means for me to be a designer and what I can offer. The goal was to find a site I could build and host my project on. I made and hosted my website using Wix. My hosted site has multiple pages, the first being my home page which contains my about info and includes my logo, my company and an exciting statement about Design Shark. The second page is my about page and the start of my company, my company's info and start and what my company entails. My third page is my skills as a designer and strengths. My last page is a services page which talks about how I view clients and the services I provide.

What I learned

What I took away from while building my building and hosting my website are all the different routes you can go to host. Various websites offer hosting's for all different prices and plans. I was never familiar with the cost to host a website and was astounded by what people pay to have their websites hosted. Using Wix made it pretty easy to build a site from scratch and just how easy it was to build with the help from the Wix site. Each section on Wix allows you to build your site to the use of limited options, but it's enough to get the job done or at least the basis of your plan accomplished. I learned more about support on a webpage and what the sites support is like, I think it's important to have very good support since this is a big move for your company and you want to get the best outcome out of your circumstance. Wix is your drag and drop website, with limited layouts to choose from, can be expensive. Overall, it is a great site, especially for small businesses and personal use. I wish I had more control then what was supplied. Also if the plans were cheaper, because they were kind of expensive in my opinion. What I was concerned about was whether or not I could build a website for a client fairly easily using Wix. Based off of my experience I feel I can make a client a website fairly fast using Wix, could even swap out colors to add themes for the client.

Where the shark travels best

The designers dream is not to achieve what can exist, but to achieve just what can't.

To live and breathe every moment to value the clients expectations.

To surpass limits and wash failure down below the ocean.

To swim to great lengths to breathe every breath

To live and make the world your ocean
